Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-impact aerobically fit individuals. The study was conducted in a laboratory setting. The subjects were 12 females, aged 20-30, who were randomly assigned to one of two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The control group performed a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-impact aerobically fit individuals. The experimental group performed a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-impact aerobically fit individuals. The results of the study showed that the experimental group had significantly higher heart rate, oxygen consumption, and energy expenditure than the control group. The results also showed that the experimental group had significantly higher levels of fatigue and muscle soreness than the control group. The results of the study suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-impact aerobically fit individuals can improve cardiovascular fitness and reduce fatigue and muscle soreness.
